FOR SNAKE POISON.

DISCOVERY THAT STRYCHNINE NEU-TRALIZES THE VENOM

Facts Recently Demonstrated Concerning the Bite of Deadly Reptiles-The Fisherman Need No Longer Incumber Himself With a Loaded Flask.

The deadly fluid secreted by certain spe cies of snakes was made a subject of study from a very early date, but the old time investigators knew not how to solve the intricate problems of organic chemistry.
All that they accomplished was to create a prodigious number of antidotes, so called, most of which in their turn were declared infallible. Not one of them was worth a

The most notable work in this line The most notable work in this line within recent years has been performed by Dr. Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia, who, for the sake of obtaining sufficient quantities of the poison, has sometimes kept as many as 100 serpents in his laboratory. His method of securing the venom for examination was to seize the snake by the neck with tongs, forcing a saucer between the jaws. The enruged animal would then bits into the saucer, on which the reign cents. into the saucer, on which the poison emit-ted was left.

The substance thus obtained is a yellowish, transparent, sticky fluid, without smell or taste, easily dissolved in water. When dried, it will retain its toxic properish. ties for any longth of time apparently, looking like a gum or varnish, and it has been preserved for 22 years without altering in the least. On this ground it is advisable to handle with caution oven the dried fangs of snakes long dead. Boiling, unless continued for a long time. unless continued for a long time, does not render the fluid harmless.

Alcohol has long held the first place in Alcohol has long held the first place in popular esteem as an antidote for snake poison. In truth, it is not such at all, though useful to sustain the vitality of the person bitten against the attack made upon it by the toxic agent. It stimulates the nerve centers and the action of the heart, if taken in small doses. But the mistake ordinarily made is to pour into the patient large quantities of whisky, the effect of which is exactly the opposite of that required. In such great doses alcohol depresses instead of stimulates the vital functions. Intoxication, far from helping the cure, aids the poison. And, by the way, people have often died from snake bite who were bitten when dead drunk. With the newly discovered antidote the bite who were bitten when dead gruns.

With the newly discovered antidote the case is exactly opposite. Danger is far With the newly discovered antidote the case is exactly opposite. Danger is far more likely to result from hesitation in using it liberally than from an overdose. Strychnine, itself a poison scarcely less terrible than snake venom, acts directly upon the nerves, stimulating and turning on their batteries, which the snake poison sceks to depress and turn off. Acting with the unerring certainty of a chamical test. the unerring certainty of a chemical test, it neutralizes the effect of the serpent venom. But it must be administered in extraordinary quantities, even to the point of producing spasmodic twitchings of the fact, the ordinary doses must be In fact, the ordinary doses must be greatly exceeded, and the administration of the strychnine must be continued, even if the total quantity injected within an hour or two amounts to what in the absenice of snake poison would be a danger-ous if not fatal dose. The few failures among the numerous successes with the drug thus far recorded have nearly all been trueable to an insufficiency of the antidote. In urgent cases as much as 20 to 25 minims should be given to any person over 15 years of age. If at the end of 20 minutes the symptoms show no abatement, a second injection of the same strength should be made promptly, and unless then a decided improvement is perceptible a third one, after a like interval. The action of the drug when applied as an antidote is not cumulative. The tendency to relapse is always great where much venom has been absorbed.

Apparently yielding to the strychning for a time, the insidious poison, after an interval during which it seems to have been conquered, all at once reasserts its presence and has to be met by fresh injecdote. In urgent cases as much as 20 to 25 presence and has to be met by fresh injec-tions, regardless of the quantity previous-ly administered. With children the amount ly administered. With children the amount of the remedy to be given must not be judged by the age of the child, but by the amount of venom to be counteracted, the degree of danger chiefly depending upon the size of the snake. The bigger the reptile of course the more poison it has. Furthermore, it is to be remembered that of all American serpents the rattlesnake is the most dangerous, the copperhead less so and the water moccasin least.

In case of snake hite the first thing to

In case of snake bite, the first thing to be done is to tie a string or a handkerchief as tightly as possible between the wound and the heart, whenever practicable. Next, cut deeply into the punctures made by the fangs, so as to cause the blood to flow freely. Suck the blood from the wound—a proceeding perfectly harmless, inasmuch as the poison does no harm when taken internally. Then carefully loosen the ligature so as to admit a small quantity of fresh blood to the member, in order that mortification may not ensue. Small doess of whisky may now be given at frequent intervals. If the patient has to wait for the arrival of a dector, this is the time to try all means to produce profuse perspirafangs, so as to cause the blood to flow free try all means to produce profuse perspira-tion. The physician will administer ex-tract of jaborandi for a sudorific and diu-retic, and will administer hypodermic injections of 15 to 20 minims of liquid strych nia, repeated every 20 minutes until slight ma, repeated every 20 minutes until slight spasms appear.

All of these facts and suggestions are summed up in a paper published by the National museum in its annual report. It is from the pen of the famous ophidian expert, Dr. Leonard Stejneger. The author states incidentally that the poisonous snakes of this country are decreasing rapidly in numbers. This is pleasant news certainly. The main cause of the decrease is the growing cultivation of land. In certainly. The main cause of the decrease is the growing cultivation of land. In parts of the country it may be traced directly to the killing of scrpents by hogs. These animals are by no means proof against the venom if it enters their veins, but their bodies are protected by a layer of fat which is thick enough ordinarily to prevent the fangs of the reptile from penetrating through it.—San Francisco Call.

HOME OF THE COLD WAVE. "

Valley In Eastern British Columbia Said to Be Its Starting Point, It is frequently asked. Where do cold caves originate? The coldest pertion of waves originate? The coldest portion of the North American continent is in all probability in the Saskatchewan valley, east of Mount Hooker and Mount Hood, both of which are situated in the Rocky mountain range that divides British Co-lumbia from the valley and the Alberta country. The height of this mountain range prevents the eastern trend or flow of vapor from the Pacific ocean from crossing over into the valley, as it would were it not for the presence of this high range of mountains.

Yet it must not be supposed that extreme cold always prevalls here, because at certain intervals the vapor from the Pacific flows cast by way of the Alaska peninsula through the upper valley of the Athabasca river into Alberta and the valley of the Saskatchewan, and there meeting with a more southern and custern flow of vapor that flows through the gap in the mountain range made by the bay of San Juan it warms and expands the atmosphere, crosses the path of the cold wave, and a warmth of from 20 to 40 degrees is the result, as we often see graphically marked on the weather map by red dots here and there on its surface. But thit mountains. here and there on its surface. But this does not satisfactorily answer why it is that the cold wave leaves its home in the above mentioned valley to go junketing on a southern tour.

To find the cause of those successive To find the cause of those successive cold waves which we experience from time to time we will have to look in quite another direction—down to the northern tropical latitude, where the great evaporation of those warm currents and ocean surfaces is carried westward from the Atlantic ocean by the trade winds and is lantic ocean by the trade winds and is massed together between the winds of the eastern off shore winds, blowing some-times from Florida and at other times times from Florida and at other times from Texas, but in either case promoting cyclonic action, which has the effect of enlarging the area of the storm, and the immediate result is an enormous expansion of atmosphere usually denominated "low." As this "low" moves across the surface of the middle or eastern states it pours down large quantities of water in the shape of rain and is constantly receiving accessions of cloud matter to replenish its energies. of cloud matter to replenish its energies, and thus in this manner it creates more or less of a vacuum, into which the air from the northwest is drawn with more or less momentum, and the cold wave is com-pleted.—Washington Post.

Dana on Journalism.

Now, Mr. Greeley is my great exemplar in journalism. He thought a newspaper man was of little use who did not know just the number of votes in every township in the state of New York and in every vet-ing precinct and who could not tell wheth-er the returns from the second district of Pound Ridge, in Westchester county, were correctly reported or not without sending to the place to find out how many votes had really been east. That was one of his great points of distinction and success, but I would not advise you to labor after that sort of knowledge unless you have inherited a natural talent for it. But you should understand and appreciate the theory of the American government. You should know where this republic began, where it came from and where it belongs in the history of mankind and what part it is history of mankind and what part it is destined to play in the vast drama of hu-man existence. That is the sort of pol-ities that must appeal to any intelligent man and that will surely test his utmost powers.

And while we are on this point we may say in passing that an American who thinks another country is better than this should not go into journalism. You must be for the stars and stripes every time, or the people of this country won't be for you, and you won't sell enough papers to pay your expenses.—Charles A. Dana in Me Clure's Magazine.

Recipe For Typewriter Ink.

Take petroleum of high melting point, melt it on a water bath and incorporate, by constantly stirring, as much lampblack or Gropblack as it will take up without becoming granular. If the petroleum remains in excess, the print will not be clear. Remove from the fire, and while it is cooling mix equal parts of petroleum, benzine and rectified oil of turpentine, and in this dissolve the fatty ink, introduced in small portions under constant stirring. The solvent should be added in such proportions that the finished ink shall be of the consistancy of fresh oil paint. Now wind the ribbon on a piece of cardboard, place on a tabon on a piece of cardboard, place on a ta ble several layers of newspaper, then un-wind the ribbon in such lengths as may be cost convenient, and lay them smooth on the paper. Apply the ink by means of a soft brush, like a toothbrush, rubbing it in well. Hardly any ink should remain on the surface. ### Professional Strong Men. I don't think I should care to be a professional "strong man."

One who says he knows declares that their average routine is to rise about 8 a. m., take port wine and an egg, lounge around for an hour, go to bed again, sleep till about noon, rise once more, eat a hearty breakfast, do the lounging act again, berbus take a wellagain, perhaps take a walk, woo the mat-tress again and sleep till pretty near the hour of performance.
